

Huge media conglomerates have all but ruined radio by playing the same controlled playlists with no input by the Dj or personality. The same is happening to print. As any big business, the media is concerned with its bottom line and not whether it is helping to inform the citizens of its sphere of influence.

I am merely a citizen with no financial input, thus next to nothing in the way of influence. I, none the less would ask that you drop any plans to allow cross ownership of newspapers and broadcast media in the same market.

Bruce Humes